Timothy Seed...

We have secured a supply of the cleanest Seeds from the largest growers in the Counties. We are sure we can recommend this seed.

We carry in stock at all times a full line of our Famous Flour, and the fact that we have an increasing demand for them bespeaks their excellence and popularity. The prices are always right, and the quality too.

We have a full line of grain, all kinds of Cracked Grain, Bran, and Shorts.

When you want Salt for the table, for butter or cheese making, or for salting your pork, remember that the "Windsor" brand is the purest and the best, and while it is the cheapest it is also the saltiest.

Try one of our little Cheese. They weigh about 8lbs. each. A nice size for the family.

St. Jude's Church,

The new church of St. Jude's was opened for divine services and dedicated to the great Head of the Church on Sunday Aug. 18th, by the Ven. the Archdeacon, of Kingston, assisted by the incumbent and Mr. W. P. Reeve, of the Cambridge Divinity School, Mass.
with all the dignity and beauty possible under our limited circumstances.
At the morning service the church was packed and after availling themselves of the porch and vestry many were still unable to get in. The Archdeacon preached a very beautiful and eloquent sermon from Ex. 33. 14. Many received the Holy Communion. The choir led the service very well indeed assisted by members from St. Luke's and St. John's.
The offertory was very good. In the afternoon the S. S. children assisted by the St. John's S. S. enjoyed a bright service. There were three baptisms and three children received into the church.

The Archdeacon again preached a most appropriate and practical sermon from St. Mark 4. 28. In the evening the church was again filled and a most hearty service was again rendered.

The Archdeacon preached a grand and eloquent sermon upon worship deriving his arguments and conclusions entirely from scripture. He showed first that worship should be reverent and the position in prayers kneeling. "O come let us worship and fall down and kneel before the Lord our maker." 2nd. That it should be common responsive worship: "And one cried unto another and said, Holy,
Holy, Holy, is the Lord of hosts."

3rd. That singing is just as much part of worship as praying, and that even prayers might be sung just as well as said. "O come let us sing unto the Lord."

4th. That worship must be sacrificial and symbolical. For I will not take that which is thine for the Lord, nor offer burnt offerings without cost.

5th. Our worship should be as beautiful as our circumstances would allow, the building itself, both outward and inward, and also in the vestments decorations and service looking back upon God's instructions to the Jews in the building of the temple and forward through St. John's revelation of what we may look for when the great church triumphant shall be the church at rest. The whole day was one long to be remembered. The church was very much admired by all who saw it.

Beautiful and useful gifts were made to the church the previous week. (The donors' names are not made public.

BIG PROFITS ON Small Investments

Returning prosperity will make many rich, but nowhere can they make so much within a short time as by successful Speculation in Grain, Provisions and Stock.

$10.00 FOR EACH DOLLAR INVESTED can be made by our Systematic Plan of Speculation originated by us. All successful speculators operate on a regular system.

It is a well-known fact that there are thousands of men in all parts of the United States who, by systematic trading through Chicago brokers, make large amounts every year, ranging from a few thousand dollars for the man who invests a hundred or two hundred dollars up to $50,000 to $100,000 or more by those who invest a few thousand.

It is also a fact that those who make the largest profits from comparatively small investments on this plan are persons who live away from Chicago and invest through brokers who thoroughly understand systematic trading.

Our plan does not risk the whole amount invested on any trade, but covers both sides, so that whether the market rises or falls it brings a steady profit that piles up enormously in a short time.

WRITE FOR CONVINCING PROOFS, also our Manual on successful speculation and our Daily Market Report, full of money-making pointers. ALL FREE. Our Manual explains margin trading fully. Highest references in regard to our standing success.

A New Church at Yarker.

For some time the congregation have contemplated the removal of their church from the hill to a more convenient location in the centre of the village, and when B. S. O'Loughlin, last winter, tendered a gift of the desired site the scheme took form and grew at once into operations for removal. A few weeks later B. S. O'Loughlin, en route to Europe, calling upon his cousins, the O'Loughlins, of New York, and upon making mention of the project of removing the church received from them the magnificent offer of a completely new edifice, to be a memorial to their father, the late Rev. Anthony Joseph O'Loughlin, who died rector of North Gower, a few years ago. The late reverend gentleman was always very fond of Yarker and its church, and spent a good part of his holidays there every year with his brother Michael O'Loughlin. The new edifice will be of pressed brick, and no expense will be spared to make it one of the handsomest buildings in the diocese.—Whig.

A Boom to Horsemen.—One bottle of English Spavin Liniment completely removed a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it acts with mysterious promptness in the removal from horses of hard, soft or calloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, sweeny, stiffness and sprains. Dyspepsia and Catarrh of the Stomach cured by B. B. B. after hope was nearly given up.

GENTLEMEN—For over three months I was very ill from what I believe was a malignant type of Dyspepsia. I at once consulted a physician who treated me for Dyspepsia without success. I then went to a specialist who diagnosed the case as Catarrh of the Stomach. His treatment also failed and I was getting worse every day. I could not rest at night and had to walk the floor to get any ease. I faled from 195 pounds down to 185 pounds and about gave up in despair when I heard of Burdock Blood Bitters as a remedy for dyspepsia. The first bottle made a great difference and I was soon much more comforted. I am now getting better. Under the use of B. B. B. I gained a pound a day. I took 12 bottles in all and am now nearly back to my old weight. I recommend dyspepsia to the old reliable B. B. B.

Friday, Sept. 13th, A.D. 1895

at the hour of 2 p.m.

The following valuable farm lands in one parcel, situate lying and being in the Township of Ernestown, in the County of Lennox and Addington, consisting of the south quarter of lot No. 17 and the south quarter of lot No. 18, both in the 7th concession of the said township of Ernestown, the North half of lot No. 17 in the sixth concession, and all that portion of the north half of lot No. 18 containing 25 acres or less as conveyed to Richard W. Miller, deceased, by Calvin W. Miller, deceased, by deed bearing date the 6th day of April, 1885, and being in the said sixth concession of the said township of Ernestown, containing in all 200 acres more or less.

Upon the said lands are erected a substantial frame house one and one-half stories high, with wood house and drive house attached, also two frame barns, and the whole land is well fenced, and upon the lands are two orchards containing in all about 200 apple trees.

The land is conveniently situated, being two miles from Switzerville P.O., three and a half miles from Cudham East, and about 8 miles from Napanee.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid fixed by the Master.

CANADA—FRIDAY, SEPT. 6, 1895.

$1 per Year in advance; $1.50 if not so paid.

Napanee Mills.

1st. An altar reredos, credence, bishop's chair, prayer desk and seat lectern and pulpit, all in butter-nut wood and manufactured at the Rathbun works, Deseronto.

2nd. A font, the base and column being of Calabogie marble and the basin of pure white. The text—"He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved," round the top and a beautiful I. H. S. in the front. It has been placed on a raised platform at the door and was manufactured by Mr. Kouber, of Napanee, in his well known style.

The church has a small debt which it is hoped will be wiped out in a few weeks, when it is expected the Archbishop will visit the parish consecrate the church, and hold a confirmation. The organ lately purchased is a very fine instrument having a double key board, double set of stops and foot peddles. Our young organist, Miss Laura Dunlop who played at all the services on Sunday and used the new organ for the first time, showed both courage and ability that should mark her as a great musician in years to come. The building committee we are sure must feel thankful that the many anxious days have been brought to such a successful issue. We cannot leave this notice without referring to the splendid manner in which each contractor, and the deep interest and pride each, together with their assistants, took in the work intrusted to them. Mess Thos. Pybus and brothers stone and brick work; Messrs. Edgar Bros. the carpentering work; Mr. McMullen, of Napanee, the plastering; and Mr. Murdock the painting. We wish to thank those who have undertaken the collecting of the funds, also we would take this opportunity to express, our grateful thanks to the friends and neighbors not of our communion who have in one way and another assisted us in our undertaking. To the many far and near both of our own communion and others who have so kindly given of their substance in either large or small amounts to the building fund and to the donors of the beautiful gifts above mentioned we return our grateful and hearty thanks. It now remains for the congregation to shew their appreciation of all that has been done for them by regular, reverent and loving attendance at the service which will be held in this beautiful little House of God and by the consistency of their lives shew the neighborhood that their religion is a reality and an assistance in their daily work.

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

GULL CREEK.

There are indications that autumn is near. Cold frosty nights which have affected very much corn and potatoes and tender vegetables.

Water is very low, this is an advantage for to harvest hay in the marshes, people are busy at this now. It is evident that all kinds of hay will be needed by next spring.

We had the pleasure of seeing some of the citizens of Napanee repeating their visit to Gull Creek recently, and glad were we to understand that their visits were successful. Lots of fish in the lakes and rivers around here but it seems that some are more successful than others.

This day schools are running full steam after the long vacation.

There is a man who called himself an evangelist, he gives his name Lloyd that has been holding meetings at the school houses in this vicinity the last two weeks, with what some call success. There is one that knows all about that. He brings out some strange expressions which are not acceptable by many. Probably, good man has good meanings for them. Let him be. If he is not one of our men, he may do some good.

CROYDON.

Dear Express—Not seeing any news from this place in your valuable paper for a long time I send you the following:—The annual picnic of the Croydon patrons was held in Mr. A. Wilde's grove on Aug. 20 and all were pleased with its success. There was a large turn out and the day was fine. Many more would have attended had it been more generally known. Among the speakers we noticed a Haycock which was neither too green nor too seedy but was in fact well cured and leader Joseph dealt out a good many dry knocks to the old political parties exposing their corruptions and bootlegging schemes to the satisfaction of the patrons present. Mr. Wilson, of Glen-garry, was present and made a telling speech in much the same strain. James Reid, M.P.P. manfully tried to ward off the blows at his party but it seemed to be hard work and towards the last the combat thickened and excitement grew to such an extent that we sometimes had two speakers at once and denial, correction, admission and contradiction were in order. E. B. Switzer Esq., patron candidate for Lennox was present but made only a short introductory speech giving the time to the "Dogs of war". Mr. Dean the master of Croydon Lodge of patrons ably filled the chair.

Croydon Fair passed off very gently and not many cattle changed hands. We are pleased to see Mr. Edgar Campbell about again after his severe illness. Also Mr. John Hunter has recovered sufficiently to go out doors again.

Bashford Close, son of John Close Esq.; fell from a tree one day last week and sustained some severe injuries but is rapidly improving.

We are pleased to see our old acquaintance Mr. John Ferguson among us again.

Mrs. Thos. Furrs has returned after spending a few days at Hugh Cambridge's, of Yarker.

Mr. Alex. Lynch is spending a few weeks with his father, Mr. F. Lynch, of this place.

Mr. Chesholm, of Roslin, is spending a few days with his daughter, Mrs. John Hunter.

Mrs. F. Brown, of Wilton, and H. Cambridge, of Camden East, were the guests of T. Furrs on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shangraw, of Colebrook, spent Sunday at Mr. A. McMahan's.

Mr. Wm. Howard has been making great improvements in his mill property, repairing the dam, putting in a flue race and new wheel. W. Smith and C. Babcock, of Odessa, are making the required changes.

Thos. Furrs was over to Sydenham one evening and captured over two hundred fish of different kinds. Quite a fish story, Tom?

We are glad to hear that Mr. Anson Close is improving in health. He is now

WILTON.

A number from here attended the holliness convention at Odessa last week.

Mr. Vermilyea is still holding services in the Methodist church.

R. Storms and H. Mills are very busy with their threshing machines.

Miss Bertha Nielson has given up her position as teacher of the Florida school as she intends going to Texas for the winter. Miss Mary Walker, Florida, will act as her substitute for the remainder of the year.

A handsome monument has been erected in the McLean plot.

Frank Martin and Latham Clark, Grenadier Island, spent Saturday and Sunday with their parents.

James Davidson has left for Kingston to attend the model school.

HAY BAY.

Most all of the farmers through this section have completed their harvesting work for this season and report crops much better than was expected at first.

On Monday last being the first day of duck-hunting on the bay, quite a number of our sportsmen from surrounding towns, villages and country took a day's outing for I would say the benefit of their health and not for the ducks. One of the lucky ones says he shot 15 ducks on that day. Quite a crowd of young men from Napanee are camping on the Island at present. They are having a loud time, I guess, by all reports.

Mrs. Frank Burnip, of Watertown, was the guest of Mr. J. A. Moore at this place on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Connolly, Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Byard Young, Napanee, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Young, of Gretna, Mr. and Mrs. George Chambers, of Little Creek, were the guests of M. E. Post Esq. on Sunday last.

Rumor says a wedding soon.

PLEASANT VALLEY.

News scarce and hop picking is the order of the day.

We are glad to state Mr. William Sills is slowly improving by the attendance of Dr. Ruttan.

Farmers in this vicinity report grain turning out well. Mr. James Cline thrashed 3 loads of oats which yielded 195 bushels. Who can beat that.

Miss Pauline Vandebogart is visiting at her sister's Mrs. Woods of Roblin.

Miss Ella McFall returned home to Prince Edward after a three months visit at her aunt's, Mrs. M. Pringle's. Wellington is so lonely.

Our school is progressing favorably under the able management of Miss Annie Edgar.

Mr. John Cline returned home Monday from hunting at Big Creek.

Miss Bata Sills spent Sunday visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover at Mr. R. Herrington's. Mr. Welcome Schryver of Big Creek, at Mr. Meal Sills. Miss Blanche Dupree at her father's. Mr. S. Dupree, Mr. T. Burly, of Morven, at the Vandebogart's. Mr. Benel, of Deseronto Road, at Mr. Dupree's.

Dear Editor as I am to go west in a few days, I shall be sorry to quit corresponding for your valuable paper. Hoping however some other block head like myself will take up the quill and write that I may read when I am in the far west what our young people of Pleasant Valley are doing.

Thanking you for your kindness toward me since I have been a correspondent. We are sorry to lose such a good correspondent and will consider ourselves fortunate if we can secure another one who will fill the position nearly so well—Ed

Curious Fine.

On Tuesday of last week a skeleton was unearthed at Napanee Mills with a knife stuck in its ribs, by some men working for the Ratibun Co. Of course a find of this nature set not a few conjectures afloat. The most feasible being that thirty-five or forty years ago the plot where the skeleton was found was used as the graveyard for the district. A few years ago when the railway tracks were being laid men ran across human bones, etc., and the residents kicked about the ashes of their dead being disturbed. The railway company was, consequently, obliged to take another course at this point, and it is thought that some of the workmen running these bones thought they would relay the skeleton, at the same time inserting the old butcher knife in the ribs.

THE CLERGYMEN AND LAYMEN UNITE.

In Their Praises of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

Taking the Bishop of Toronto, Right Rev. A. Sweatman, D. D. C. L., three of the leading members of the Faculty of McMaster Hall, and men like the Rev. W. H. Withrow, and others, as representing the Methodist Church, all of whom have spoken in high terms of the merits of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and unite with these the warm endorsement of this medicine by the well known Toronto journalist Mr. W. L. Smith, as representing the laymen and it must be granted that clergymen and laymen are of one mind touching this truly meritorious medicine. The truth is that every one who uses the medicine has a good word to say for it.

One short puff of the breath through the blower, supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, diffuses this over the surface of the nasal passages. Painless and delightful to use. It relieves in 10 minutes and permanently cures catarrh, hay fever, colds, headache, sore throat, tonsilitis and deafness. 60 cents. Sample bottle and blower sent on receipt of two three-cent stamps. Sam and Leslie Webster visited Ogdensburg on Aug. 26th and were plucked in short order. They reside in Lansdowne, back of Brockville, and soon after arriving had a few drinks. Then they went over to Kate Porter's sporting house, and as they were about to enter, a young man with a very pleasant and honest-looking face, stepped up to them and said that if they had any money about them they had better not take it inside the building, as it was a sort of spider and fly place, that is they would get kicked out the back door later without any money. They were questioned as to where they lived, and after learning their rental friend said he was a Canadian

HAY BAY.

In a recent issue of the Beaver appeared a scurrilous article attacking the Hay Bay correspondent of the EXPRESS. It was in the Beaver's well known style, and gave evidence that it was concocted and written in the office of that journal, in the presence probably of one of the interested parties. It was so heavily laden with venom, untruths and mean insinuations that it shows at once that the Beaver had a large share in writing it, and that its ability to throw mud and mire truth is not diminishing but increasing. The Beaver's statement that its Hay Bay correspondent was forced to discontinue writing on account of the attacks of the Hay Bay correspondent of THE EXPRESS is a bold untruth. The truth of the matter is that the said correspondent was sending so much downright "rot" and nonsense to the Beaver that the correspondent's friends got disgusted, and induced the writer to cease. Mr. G. Post sends us a letter, avert the Beaver's article, for publication, in which the parties interested are handled as they richly deserve. Mr. Post writes as follows:

To the Editor of the EXPRESS,

DEAR SIR.—I feel it a case of necessity to reply to a correspondence, as called that appeared in the Beaver from Hay Bay. I might mention the names of the writer and assistants who wrote such a slanderous and corrupt letter, but will forbear. About the prominent church workers mentioned, who use the choir as a sparkling school, and sends word to her gentlemen friends through the medium of the milkman I will not say much. "She is a lady in every respect." This is good news and it is too bad that she had to tell it herself, as no one was aware of the wonderful change. What a pity that the faithful church worker has not read and thoroughly studied the 23 Chap of Deuteronomy. The Beaver correspondent refers to living in glass houses, etc. I have heard of B's best fellow being thrown through a window on account of non-payment of debt. The "helper" correspondent should stick to political affairs. We understand he ran for councillor once. Why didn't he run again? Ask him and he will be ashamed to answer. Some generous and sympathetic people say, how rude to cast sharp stones at the tender rose, but seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you. If the church cobbler is so filled with overflowing christian kindness, why not care for the deserted plot and tenderly remove the sacred remains to the cosy home in Westbrooke, which is only weighed down by a $4,000 mortgage.

The remark about the choir was all right. "B" said if she was boss there would be no married people in the choir. "B's" remark that those who came to the party that "B" was not asked to, did so out of respect for my father, would imply that I wasn't very much respected. Those who were present were well pleased and said they would like to be present at any of my future parties.

As it happens my father's farm is not mortgaged to the full extent of its value. It was everything would be all right with my opponent, as that is what he means when he says that a dose of their own medicine might prove sufficient. Perhaps it would. None should know better than those who have experienced it, and Mr. G and Mr. J ought to be pretty conversant with it by this time. I am told by a man of credit that Mr. J has said if I write any more for THE EXPRESS he would circulate a petition asking for signatures in an effort to break up the newspaper business of Napanee. If he does so let him put the names of those signers to whom he owes a debt on one side of the paper, and those whom he does not owe on the other and see which side will be full first. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your space. I remain, Yours, etc.

More Kind Words From Hamilton Regarding the Great Remedy Which Cures Rheumatism in One Three Days.

Mrs. Phillips, sr., corner Hunter and Gratz streets, Hamilton: "Several months ago I was afflicted with rheumatism, which completely crippled me. South American Rheumatic Cure being recommended to me, I procured a bottle and obtained perfect relief from the first few doses. It is without doubt the quickest relief for rheumatism I have ever seen, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from this disease.

see them lose all they had. The Websters thought they could hang onto their money but being assured that the girls of the house would get it away from them, they were in a quandary what to do with it. Finally, just to accommodate them, their friend said he would take it and keep it for them. The Canadians handed over $18, and entered the dive, leaving the other outside holding their money to keep them from getting robbed. And he is holding it yet, for once they were inside he started off at a rapid pace toward Morrisstown, and has not returned as yet. Several hours later they complained to the police, but did not know who their friend was, other than he said he was a Canadian from Brockville. They started on foot for home next morning, not having enough money to pay for a ride.

THE FARMERS COLLEGE.

The new Veterinary School in connection with Queen's University, Kingston, and the Dairy Schools opened last winter, have been established solely in the interest of the general farmer and stock raiser. In these days, when farming has to be done scientifically in order to make it pay, it is essential that the farmer should know something about such contagious diseases as epizootic, glanders, &c. Pleuro-pneumonia keeps American cattle out of the European markets. A farmer often loses a valuable horse or cow when a little knowledge of veterinary medicine would have saved its life. The plain moral seems to be: Teach your sons how to treat the diseases of the domestic animals, and to do this well send them to the Veterinary College, Kingston, and to the Dairy School.

WHAT THINK YE ALL OF IT

WELL AND STRONG AFTER HALF A CENTURY OF SUFFERING !

The Cure is a Wonderful One

Wrought by Paine's Celery Compound
The Great Strength and Health-Giver.

The memory of the great discoverer of Paine's Celery Compound will ever be sacred to the thousands who have been wonderfully delivered from disease and suffering. The united efforts of this world's medical men will never equal the work, the mighty life-saving results, that have come to sufferers through the virtues of Paine's Celery Compound.

The most difficult, most distressing, and the seemingly hard and incurable cases, are successfully cured by the great medicine. There is no reason why any man or woman should despair and give up hope, while they can procure the medicine that drives away disease.

Strong and incontrovertible proof—testimony from one who suffered for over fifty years—will give hope and inspiration to many of Canada's sufferers who, up to the present, have been unsuccessful with physical and the common advertised medicines of the day.

The marvellous and speedy cure of Mrs. A. R. Parsons, of Sutton, P. Q., has created a wonderful sensation in that special section of the Eastern Townships. Professional men, business men, and farmers, have discussed the subject, and to-day Paine's Celery Compound has a reputation and a fame in the district that no other medicine ever possessed.

Mrs. Parsons writes very briefly, but to the point: she says:

"I am delighted to send my testimony regarding your most valuable medicine, Paine's Celery Compound."

"Sometime ago I had Grippe, which left me so lame and weak that for six months I could not get up without help. I told my husband that nothing else but Paine's Celery Compound could help me, after other medicines and doctors had failed."

"After taking several bottles of Paine's Celery Compound, I feel that I am cured; I can now walk and go up and down stairs with ease, and do all my housework. Under the blessing of God and your Paine's Celery Compound, I am now well."

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, SEPT. 6, 1895

TOWN COUNCIL.

An adjourned session of the town council was held on Monday evening last.

Present—Mayor Stevens in the chair, Reeve Carson, Deputy Reeve Symington and Councillors Alexander, Burns, Madole, Leonard, Ward, Lowry and Miller.

A communication was read from Mr. Alfred Knight regarding the drain in front of his place. Filed.

On motion of Coun. Ward, seconded by Coun. Madole, the Street Committee was instructed to investigate and report.

A petition was read from Mr. George Lloyd and others asking for a new walk on the east side of Simcoe street from Dundas to Bridge street. Referred to Street Committee to report.

Uriah Wilson, M. P., addressed the council regarding the drain for which he asked tile at the last session. He said he wanted the tile for the purpose of draining the cellars of his houses on Bridge Street and only purposed laying the drain in front of his own property. On being questioned he stated that he also wanted it to drain from a water closet which he purposes putting in the house.

Moved by Coun. Burns, seconded by Reeve Carson, that the Street Committee procure six inch tile to lay a drain from the corner of Bridge and Robert Streets to the creek which runs in the rear of Mr. Gleeson's house on West Street.

Moved in amendment by Deputy Reeve Symington, seconded by Coun. Leonard that the matter be deferred for one week to await report of Street Committee as asked for.

The amendment carried.

Coun. Ward, of the special committee appointed to wait upon the school board to see if some of their estimates could be cut down, reported that some of the members of the board were away and no action could be taken by them. He made some enquiries from some of the members during the week, and from what he could gather from their remarks the council need not look for a cut in any item, for there was not the slightest disposition on the part of the school board to reduce their estimates.

On motion of Reeve Carson, seconded by Coun. Madole, the motion relating to the estimates for Fire, Water and Light committee passed at the last session, was reconsidered and the amount was placed at $3,500 the same as last year.

It was the opinion of the council that the following should be the rate for the year 1895-96:

For General Purposes... 17.9 mills.

For School Purposes... 8.6 mills.

and that the tax demands should show what the money is being raised for.

On motion of Coun. Ward, seconded by Coun. Lowry, the matter was left in the hands of the Finance Committee for the purpose of securing legal advice on certain points, and if possible to fix the rate at 26 1/2 mills and prepare a by-law in accordance therewith to be passed at the next session of the council. Carried.

On motion the assessor was paid $25 for extra services.

On motion of Reeve Carson, seconded by Coun. Alexander, Mr. Walker was charged $2.00 license for showing Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Mr. W. F. Hall, secretary of the Board of Education, was called upon to address the council for the purpose of explaining some of the school estimates.

A report was presented from the Fire Water and Light Committee regarding the account placed in their hands at last session, recommending payment less $8.75. Adopted.

The council adjourned.

IT DOES BOTH.

South American Kidney Cure not only Relieves Kidney Disease Immediately but it also Heals and Removes the Trouble.

These dragging pains in the loins that are a common symptom of kidney trouble are most distressing, but they are only the forerunner of more acute pain, and will develop rapidly if an effective remedy is not applied. No medicine acts on the kidneys with such speediness as South American Kidney Cure. It gives relief in the most distressing cases in a few hours. But it does not stop here. It is a great healer, and its continuous use for a short time completely banishes the disease. It is a cure for kidney trouble, and only it, but it never fails here.

CANADIAN PIRATES.

They Infest the Straits of Belle Isle and Little Plunder Escapes Them.

It is no other part of the world, perhaps, than such a daring gang of pirates as that which infests the straits of Belle Isle, the narrow passage north of Newfoundland, by which steamships in the summer months reach the Gulf of St. Lawrence from Europe. Some of them live a good part of the year on Belle Isle itself, but others come from Newfoundland, Labrador, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, ostensibly to engage in the fisheries, but in reality on the lookout for what they can loot and steal from ships in distress.

There are at least three or four wrecks every year in the vicinity of Belle Isle, and sometimes a great iron steamship breaks up or runs aground there. This is a rich harvest for the pirates. They swarm about the wreck and help themselves to everything that they can lay hands on. The captains and crews of such ships in distress usually all they can do to save their lives from this treacherous coast, without concerning themselves with the fate of their cargoes. Should they venture to remonstrate with these highwaymen of the sea for the freedom with which they help themselves to other people's property, they would be laughed at for their pains, as was the captain of the wrecked steamship Mexico, a few days ago. Captain Daly has just arrived from the scene of the wreck of his ship, with the most startling description of his experiences with the pirates.

Daly endeavored to make terms with the captains of the fishing schooners that swarmed about the wreck for the saving of the cargo, but they laughed in his face, saying they intended to take everything that they could lay hands on. As an instance of the bare-faced character of the robbery carried on by them, Daly reports that he went aboard one schooner at a time when it was deserted by all save a woman. He suspected that some of his effects were concealed on board. The woman protested that there was nothing whatever belonging to him. He insisted upon a search, and found nailed to the bulkhead the portrait of his wife and children which had been taken from his cabin. Continuing the search he found a small hatch battened down, and upon opening it discovered thirteen bags of clothing belonging to his shipwrecked sailors. Shipping men feel that it is an outrage upon foreign as well as Canadian shipping for such a gang of pirates to be permitted at large in Canadian waters to prey upon the commerce of the world, and wonder that justice was not meted out to them long ago. Thus far, no attempt whatever has been made to bring these marauders to justice. Were a gunboat to be sent down to the straits, as many wish, it would be dodged quite easily by the fast-sailing, light-draught, fishing, wrecking and smuggling schooners of the gulf, with the intimate knowledge possessed by their crews of the bays and coves of the coast.

Some day the pirates will encounter a well-armed captain and crew at a wreck, for steamship men know what they have to expect here. There will be a desperate fight, for the pirates are well armed, and on some of their smuggling expeditions they have already engaged the crews of the Government revenue cutters.—New York Sun.

Pretty Ornaments.

a bowl, did you? Well, it will. Take a glass and fill it nearly full of salt; then water it every morning the same as you would a house-plant. After you water it the first day pour in a little of three or four prettily-colored inks. In about a week the salt will begin to grow and will run over the cup and begin to crystallize on the sides. The different colors in the ink blend, and the effect is strikingly beautiful. Another mighty handsome ornament can be made with a glass nearly full of water, and a handful of oats. Just pour the oats in the water, and in a month a beautiful green bunch will spring up and grow to a height of about a foot. The sprouts will stay modest looking of their number to accompany him to Manhattan Beach. She accepted and they left. Not to go minutely into details, they had a nice dinner and were listening to the music when two young men passed. One of them looked rather intently at the girl and smiled. She was somewhat near-sighted, and, willing of the matter afterward, she said she thought the young man was a friend, whereupon she smiled and bowed. The prude saw it all, and taking her by the arm he led her to the young man, and addressing him who had bowed to the girl, he said:

"I don't know your name, sir, but this lady seems to desire your company more than she does mine. She is Miss Blank, of No. — West street, and I will save her in your care, hoping you will see her safely to her home."

"Before he had concluded the astonished girl had discovered that the young man to whom she had bowed was a stranger but she had not time to make any explanation to 'the prude,' for as he finished he strode rapidly away. She dismissed the strangers, bought a railroad ticket and returned home, where she recited the mortifying story to her friends. And it was then and there, after putting their heads together, they hatched the scheme which sent 'the prude' to Europe on a wild goose chase."

"The conspirators," the narrator continued, "had a friend who was the postmistress in a small, near-by town, and they enlisted her aid, she being only too willing after she knew the circumstances. Soon 'the prude' received a nicely scented letter, in a woman's hand, and the girl had the pleasure of seeing it on his plate at the breakfast table, and of noticing the pleased expression as he read it. They knew that the letter purported to be from a lady who had seen him, but had never met

There was a letter on his plate, him, but was extremely desirous of knowing him—so much so that she suggested to make an appointment to meet her. She signed herself 'Blanche Willoughby' and said she lived in Brooklyn, and requested him to send his reply to the Brooklyn post office, where she would get it by calling for it.

"Whether he felt flattered, or what it was that actuated the man who so detested flirting, he answered the letter, which, by prearrangement, was forwarded from the Brooklyn post office to the out-of-town postmistress, and from her hands it went direct to the fair plotters, who had all manner of fun with it. Then ensued an animated correspondence between 'the prude' and Blanche, and it tickled the girls immensely to note his flush of pleasure when on going to the breakfast table he would find the daintiest notes from his supposed fair inamorata. Never did he read them at the table; they were too sacred for that; he gently put them in his pocket, waiting till he got to the seclusion of his room before breaking open the envelope.

But the young fellow was becoming impatient to meet her, so Blanche told him to be at Trinity church the next Sunday morning, and to wear a large red rose as a boutonniere. He was on hand, and so were the four conspirators. As luck would have it, a young woman fainted, and was carried from the church placed in a carriage by her

THE LONDON OF TO-DAY.

ONE'S FIRST WEEKS IN THE METROPOLIS ARE NEVER FORGOTTEN

Profound is the impression created by the vastness and stateliness of the Modern Babylon—The Spires of Greater London—The City's Magnificent Pleasure Grounds.

An English correspondent of the New York Tribune, in a recent letter to that journal, gives the following interesting account of the city of London as it is to-day:

An American friend, who has lived in London for many years, surprised me a day or two ago by congratulating me upon being a newcomer with a fresh pair of eyes. "I envy anyone," he said, "the high privilege of making a first visit in England. One's first weeks in London are never to be forgotten, but how soon they pass, and with them the supreme happiness of earliest impressions!" What he meant was that the high tension of sensibility speedily relaxes, and London, with its splendid antiquity, infinite variety and awe-inspiring vastness, becomes familiar and prosaic. My friend convinced me that there might be compensations for rawness and inexperience, and that my earliest impressions of the liveliest country and the greatest town in the world might have some value.

Since one cannot come up to London without a short journey from the coast, the first word must be about the loveliness of English rural scenery. Whoever enters England at Southampton, the most convenient gateway, seems to be journeying all the way through a continuous park, planned by a landscape gardener who has known the poetry of his art. It is not necessary to refer to the distant glimpse of the noble cathedral of Winchester, the picturesque villages, the thatched-roof cottages, the stately trees, the broad sweeps of level meadow, the winding lanes, the flowering hedges and other equally familiar details. What is most remarkable in this series of entrancing rustic pictures is the absence of blemishes and flaws. There is nothing unsightly at any turn. There are no blackened stumps bleaching in the fields; there are no ugly fences falling out of repair; no depressions in the slopes of the well-dained mead-

AN INEFFECTIVE CURE.

The Remedy Was Administered All Right,
But It Did Not Work.

A bachelor clergyman bought a parrot to relieve his silent chambers. The dealer assured him it was a good talking bird, but warned him not to be surprised if it was silent for a few days until it became accustomed to its surroundings.

A week later the clergyman was back at the bird store. He said the man must come and take the parrot away. The night before he had a number of his best parishioners visit him, he explained, and the conversation 'woke Polly up. It talked all right, but such talk! Oaths, execrations of the most awful kind the bird poured out in torrents. Such a bird he could not keep.

"You can cure him of that," said the dealer. "Parrots often remember stuff they learned early, but you can cure them. The next time Polly swears have a pall of water ready and souse him into it, cage and all, and then shake and kick the cage around. Thrill the bird thoroughly, and it will never swear again."

The experiment was duly tried and the next time Polly swore the bird were plunged into the water and then the kicking and shaking began. But in this process the catches which held the cage to its pan were loosened, and Polly got out. However the clergyman resolved to make this lesson thorough, pelted the unlucky bird with books, slippers and other articles. Finally, when he was tired, Polly crawled up on the back of a chair and shook out its bedraggled and drenched plumage.

"H-r-r-r-r-h"—and then, catching sight of the clergyman—"Say where in—! were you when the cyclone struck us?"

It Costs to Study at Yale.

According to the Yale Senior Class Book, just published, the average expenses of the student at that college are $912 for the freshman year, $643 for the sophomore, $642 for the junior and $1,032 for the senior. This expenditure would require an earning capacity of $18 to $20 a week, or something over $1 a day for the six working days of the week. This is more than three times the average wage of the unskilled labor in the State, as shown by the census. It is considerably above the average wage of the educated and skill-

Most Powerful Vessel Afloat.

The British cruiser Terrible, recently launched on the Clyde, is the most powerful vessel in the world. The length of the great war vessel is over all 638 feet; breadth, 71 feet; depth to upper deck, 43 feet 4 inches. The displacement is 14,250 tons, being an enormous increase on the Blenheim or the Blake, the largest vessels of this type in the British navy. The Terrible has no belt of side armor, as in previous men-of-war, the machinery and magazines being protected by a steel arched deck of great strength. The top of this arch is 31 feet above the water line, while the edges are 7 feet below the sides of the vessel. The engines are triple expansion, and indicate 25,000 horsepower, and will develop a speed of 32 knots. The vessel is a new departure in war ship construction, being built on the lines of the large Atlantic liners.

Fish Get the Wrong Bait.

A fisherman who went down into Lake Keuka in ships of the skiff variety in order to fish, trailing a jug of bait behind the boat to keep it cool, was twice annoyed by having his jug broken, which, of course, put an end to the fishing for the day. On the second occasion when this occurred, the fisherman soon after saw a large fish swimming about near the surface in a lazy and irresolute way. He rowed up to the fish, and to his surprise was able to pick it up in his hands. The fish was perfectly sound, but had rather more color than usual, but his breath smelled strongly of alcohol. This gave him an idea. Next day he trailed behind his boat a jug wherein the lure was cunningly commingled with opium. Hid in the stern of the boat, while another rowed he kept sharp watch. Presently he saw a number of monstrous fish approach, bearing on their noses they had evidently rooted out of the lake bottom. One sharp crack from the jug, when the thieves eagerly drank up the liquid as it mingled with the surrounding water. Shortly after a number of the finest fish ever seen on the lake floated to the top in their opium dream of bliss, and were captured.

of tidiness in the villages. There is the refinement of landscape art without traces of neglect, carelessness, or lack of harmony. No rural scenery can be more beautiful than the English fields and byways in May, when the pink bloom is on the chestnuts, the hawthorn is bursting into flower, and the meadows are lighted up with the golden tints of the laburnum and innumerable red and white flowers. Nowhere are the flowers lovelier and more delicate; nowhere are the trees more shapely or the fields greener. Everywhere there is a sense of symmetry and repose that comes from perfection of detail. The English country scenes are not in a transition stage with disfigurements to be removed. The English country is finished. Nothing remains to be done in order to perfect these pictures of rural loveliness.

The same impressions are produced by the magnificent pleasure grounds of London and its environs. I do not refer to the new parks, commons and breathing places controlled by the County Council and in process of transformation, but to the old parks, and especially to Hyde Park, Regent's, Kew Gardens, Richmond and Hampton Court. These, too, like the English country, are finished. Where can there be a finer stroll than a walk through Hyde Park in the early forenoon or in the late afternoon, when the light is softly tempered and the background is not too brilliant? Or where can there be a lovelier drive than that from Kew to Richmond, and thence through Bushey Park to Hampton Court? There has been a long, disagreeable winter, which has impaired the most robust constitutions and tended to depress the most buoyant spirits; but nature has not suffered from the protracted frosts and sharp changes. The trees are full, and the verdure of the woods and fields is as vivid as ever. The oaks, walnuts, beeches, larches, cedars and chestnuts show no sign of weakness or dryness; the azalea are flaming with splendour and over the hedgerows hangs a glory of pink and white, and fields powdered with butecups, daisies and bluebells are free from dust and delicate in their freshness of tone. The English love their trees and flowers, and know how to group and mass them. In their parks they study the broadest and most restful effects, and avoid fussiness and prettiness in details. There is an artistic sense of tranquillity and repose in their landscape art that is lacking in American rural and suburban scenery. Everything is finished, perfect and harmonious.

He must have indeed a dull soul who can stand in Westminster Abbey for the first time or catch from the Thames his earliest glimpse of the dome of St. Paul's and the Houses of Parliament after a long walk from Hyde Park to Lombard street, without being profoundly impressed with all the vastness and stateliness of London. It is modern London in a transition stage that he sees. Of old London, comparatively little remains, although what there is of it is either splendid in form or rich in precious associations. There are the storied spots in the bulkiest quarters haunted by benignant ghosts for those who have eyes to see them; but the modern town is not so incomparably great and interesting as to discourage historical reminiscences and sentimental journeys for the identification of famous sites. The visitor is now content to have antiquity massed for him, in the incomparably abbey, the ancient tavern and chophouses, and the tower; and even in the last named spot his attention is distracted by the splendid new bridge which spans the Thames. That is a parable of the relations of past and present in London. The new is everywhere jostling and crowding out the old. London, in spite of its blackened stone fronts, is essentially modern. It challenges attention and admiration less for what it has been than for what it is—the centre of latter-day civilization, the metropolis of the modern world.

CHAPTER VI.

Vane and the two women remained quite silent until he could bear it no longer. He jumped up and went out, and looked round. One of the revenue men was standing at a little distance, as if on guard, but as Vane approached him he walked off.

Vane looked round carefully and watched the men go off in the boat, then returned to the cottage. He heard Mrs. Trevanion and Nora talking earnestly, but as he entered they stopped. Nora went to the fire, and stood with her back to him. Mrs. Trevanion looked him steadily in the face.

"After what you've seen this morning, Mr. Tempest," she said, quietly, "you will no doubt agree with me, that the sooner you leave this place the better."

Vane was about to repudiate the suggestion, but she waved her hand, and went on :

"No," she said, "it will not do for you to be mixed up with such people as us and such business as this. I urged you to stay this morning because I thought you were not well enough to go; but Nora tells me," her grey eyes lightened with a grim satisfaction, "that you were well enough to knock down the man who seized her, and I think that proves that you have recovered your strength sufficiently for you to continue your journey."

Vane inclined his head and was about to speak, when she again went on :

"I don't know whether Nora thanked you for rescuing her," she said, in the same measured tones, "but I do so now. We are grateful to you, Mr. Tempest."

"I'm afraid I didn't hurt him enough," said Vane. "I wasn't in the best form you see. But look here, Mrs. Trevanion, I hope you're not sending me away because you think that I'm afraid of—that I want to leave you because of this—this trouble. I don't want to pry into your secrets," he continued; "I don't mean to ask a single question. It's nothing to me whether what that fellow said was right or wrong; which emotion; then tore them apart, and stood before him, still with the same half-defiant, half-reproachful expression.

"Yes, it was I! Look!"

She sprang away from him, and dashing up the rocks, caught at a rope almost hidden by the ferns.

Vane saw the bridge shake and shiver, then drop suddenly.

He stood and looked at it like a man in a dream.

A moment or two afterward the bridge swung back into its place again, and Nora stood by his side.

"You see—you understand?" she said.

"You mean that you let this bridge down and dropped us—me and the horse?" exclaimed Vane.

"Yes," she said, doggedly.

"Why did you do that?" he asked, not unnaturally.

She drew a long breath.

"I thought you were the revenue man," she said—"the new man. The old one gave us no trouble."

"Then—then—you are—"

"We are smugglers—yes," she said, quietly. "It is quite true. Aunt and I sail that boat into the bay, and meet the schooners from France. They are loaded with spirits and tobacco. We bring it from them to the cottage, and then the men come with carts at night, and take it away to Tarnstock and Tidford."

Vane leaned against the horse and stared at her.

"I can scarcely believe it," he said, spoke to himself than to her.

"It is true," she said. "We are smugglers. Ever since I can remember it has been the same. There is no harm in it. Everybody used to be smugglers once; the squire up at the Hall, before Squire Vale; the parson at Porth; all the people at Treloren. Until this new man came, no one took any notice."

Vane laughed.

"Upon my word, Miss Nora," he said, "I can scarcely believe that I am awake and not dreaming. We never even hear of such things as this in London." He laughed again incredulously.

"And you forgive me?" she breathed.

one else, and no one's a pen the worse, and—there's an end of it. Good-bye, and remember: If ever you are in any trouble and want a friend, send or to come to me; don't hesitate a moment. You'll promise, won't you?"

"I promise!"

Her eyes looked up at him pleadingly, trustingly; so unlike the eyes that had flashed upon him the night she had let the bridge fall, that they seemed rather the eyes of some other person.

Vane was but human, after all, and under the influence of her gaze he moved by an unfortunate impulse, bent down, drew her closer, and—put his lips to hers.

It was the first kiss Nora Trevanion had ever received, and it affected her terribly.

She started—a faint shudder ran through her, and her face grew instantly white.

Vane crimsoned.

"—I beg your pardon," he said. "Confound it!" under his breath; "what made me do that? I beg—your pardon—pray forgive me!" he said, aloud. "I ought not to have done it; but—but it was just to show that we parted friends. Miss Nora."

"Was that why?" she breathed, almost inaudibly. "Was it because you quite, quite forgive me?"

"Yes, yes," he said: "that was it."

Again she seemed to force herself to raise her face, and in accents that in their intense gravity were indicative of innocence itself, she murmured:

"You may kiss me again."

Vane took off his hat, bent, bareheaded, and kissed her; then she broke from him, but not abruptly, and stood at a little distance.

"Good-bye," she said.

Vane touched the horse with his heel and rode on.

When he had gone a hundred yards or so, he looked back. She was still standing looking after him, her hand shading her eyes. He waved to her and called her name, but she did not move nor make any response. So she stood until he had disappeared; then she seemed to awake as if from a dream, and looked round her, pushing the hair from her brow with a hand that quivered.

A heavy sigh rose from her heaving bosom, and with an utter abandonment she sunk upon the grass, and half crouching, half lying, hid her face in her hands.

A dense darkness seemed to have fallen on her young life; her half-savage nature was cowed and weighed down by an emotion so utterly novel and strange as to amount almost to the ecstasy of gain. She felt as if something had gone out of her life—out of the world itself—and forever; and as if, for her, there never would be any more gladness, or even peace.

you. I don't know how I can help you; but perhaps you can think of a way, and, whatever it is, I shall be only too glad to do it. It would only be a poor acknowledgement of your great kindness to me."

Nora looked over her shoulder at him, her dark eyes fixed on his face; and it was that moment a very handsome one. Mrs. Trevanion nodded.

"You're very good," she said, almost coldly, "but you can do nothing for us, except keep silence."

"Well, I can do that, at any rate," said Vane.

As he spoke, Nora went to a corner and took up his saddle and bridle. Vane took them from her, but she yielded them up reluctantly.

"Go with Mr. Tempest and show him the lower road, Nora," said Mrs. Trevanion.

Nora held out his hand.

"I am going, Mrs. Trevanion," he said, with a gravity that did not sit badly on him, "but I must say that it is very much against my will, for I should like to stop and see you through this. I'm not accustomed to running away from my friends when they're in trouble, and it's only because you send me—"

"Yes, it's better that you should go," she said, but a little less coldly. It was evident that his frank offer of help had touched her somewhat. "You could not help us; in fact, your presence here would only complicate matters. Besides," she added, with a smile, "we are quite capable of taking care of ourselves. You spoke of 'friends.' We can scarcely claim to be 'friends' of yours, Mr. Tempest."

"Oh, I call a friend one who acts as such," said Vane. "And I'm sure you have treated me as only the best of friends could have done. Anyway, Mrs. Trevanion, if I can be of any service to you, I shall be more than glad. Miss Nora has my address—98 St. James street—and a line—just a line—will bring me down in post haste."

The woman looked at him steadily.

"Thank you," she said, "but it is not likely that that line will be written. We need no help. The best thing you can do for us, Mr. Tempest, is to forget that you ever spent two or three days in the 'Witches' Cauldron.'"

She held out her hand. Vane clasped it in his strong one for a moment. Then he turned away.

Nora had already left the cottage, and was waiting him on the shelf of rock. With the saddle and bridle on his arm, he followed her along the narrow track, up the hill and down by the side of the precipice into the gorge into which he and his horse had fallen.

The horse was grazing beside the stream, and whinnied at the sound of their footsteps. Vane saddled it, Nora standing by with a dreamy, far-away look on her face.

"We were in luck the other night," he said, as he passed his hand over the horse's legs. "We ought to have been killed, both of us—" he glanced up at the bridge and laughed. "It's evident that he's got strong bones, and I've got a thick head. All the same, I'd get that bridge mended, Miss Nora."

She raised her eyes and looked at him, then dropped them again, and said nothing.

"I'm all ready now," he said, "and if you'll show me the way—But are you sure I can do nothing?"

"Follow me," she said; then she stopped suddenly, and confronted him as he stood with the bridle over his arm. Her face was pale, her dark eyes heavy, yet glowing, as if fire were burning behind them; and their expression was a strange mixture of wild defiance and tender remorse.

"Don't you know?" she said, or rather breathed.

Vane looked at her inquiringly.

"Know—know what?" he said.

The eyes lowered, and her bosom heaved.

"You must," she said; "you cannot be blind. Don't you know how you—you fell the other night?"

Vane shook his head.

"The planks of the bridge gave way, didn't they?" he said. "It was so confoundedly dark that I didn't notice."

"No," she said, and her lips came together and made a straight line. "The bridge is all right; you could have ridden over it. It was I who did it—I who threw you down."

"You!" said Vane, with a faint smile.

She clasped her hands for a moment as if under the stress of some strong anger."

"Angry!" Vane frowned. "Good heavens, why should I be? You did the proper thing, from your point of view."

She gazed at him inquiringly, wondering.

"You did just what I should have done if I'd been a girl and wanted to stop that fellow from interfering with me. I dare say smuggling's all wrong; but, you see, you've been used to it all your life, and it's evidently considered quite correct and natural, and so—And you let that bridge down? By Jove! I admire your pluck!"

The color came and went in her face.

"I tried to kill you," she murmured. Vane smiled.

"I dare say. Now that I remember you looked very much as if you meant to, as you stood waving me back. Anyhow, you gave me fair warning, only, I suppose. I didn't hear what you said. I'm glad you didn't kill me, Miss Nora."

She looked at him, and drew a long breath.

"Yes," she whispered; "so am I. I did not care then the other night. When I am like that, in a passion, I do not care what happens, whether I kill myself or any one else. But now—"

She looked round with a half-dazed expression, as if puzzled by some quiet novel emotion.

"Now we have got to be friends, you're glad I came off scot-free," said Vane. "Is that it?"

"Yes," she whispered.

They walked along, he with the bridle over his arm, she by his side, her head drooping.

"Well, I ought to consider myself an extremely lucky fellow," said Vane, after a pause. "Everybody is on the lookout for adventures nowadays, and I know half a dozen men who would give their heads to see what I've seen these last few days. By Jove! they would scarcely believe it all, if I were free to tell it. It's wonderful, incredible. He looked at her, with a man's ready sympathy for youth and beauty in his eyes. "But I wish you had let me stay a little longer and seen you through this business."

She shook her head.

"You mean that there is nothing I can do, as your aunt said? Well, I'm afraid there isn't much, but I'd give anything to help you. Shall I speak to Mr. Vale up at the Hall there? He seems to be your nearest neighbor, and may be able to help you in some way out of this trouble."

She shook her head.

"No," she said, "do not. Aunt does not like any one to know where we live, or anything about us. Do not speak of us or think of us. Forget us."

"That's easier said than done," said Vane, rather gravely.

"Yes," she assented, with a little catch in her voice. "It is difficult to forget a person who has tried to kill you."

"I didn't mean that," he responded.

"That's forgotten already. It's your kindness to me"—he was going to add, "your beautiful face," but stopped himself in time—"that I shall find it impossible not to remember." He stopped to light his cigar, and then sauntered on as before. He was in no hurry to go to part with her. It was pleasant—more than pleasant—to have her walking beside him, her little figure, grace itself, as she paced along, her exquisite face softened by some reflection of which he was ignorant.

Every now and then she glanced at him from the corner of her eye, as if she were trying to fix the image of his face in her mind. Presently they came to an opening in the valley and to the verge of a fairly good road.

She stopped and pointed.

"That is the road," she said, in a low voice. "It goes straight to the Hall."

He sprang into the saddle and bent down and held out his hand. She put hers into it, and raised her face to his.

As she did so Vane started. He saw that her eyes were full of tears; wonderfully, truly, wonderful eyes they were, shining through the clear crystal; orbs to haunt the man who looked into their depths for many a day and night.

"Good-bye, Miss Nora," he said.

"Don't—don't be upset about that—that accident, you know; for after all it was an accident. You took me for some

About the same hour as that in which Vane Tempest rode on his way to his mysterious uncle, Senley Tyers was at work in his studio.

This studio was rather a remarkable apartment, and although it had only been in existence some three months, people—fashionable people—the people who make or mar one's fortune—were beginning to talk about it.

It was situated in Mount Street—which Theodore Hook said was the street in London in which everybody should or ought to live. It is near the park, it is quiet, and the houses in it are convenient and roomy.

Senley Tyers could not have chosen a better locale for his studio than No. 101 Mount street.

It was a long room, one end of which was divided from the rest by curtains of sea-green plush. The walls were clothed, not papered, with the right shade of terra-cotta, upon which hung a few cartoons in rough chalk, and one or two water-sketches. The light came principally from above, and was carefully toned so that there was no vulgar glare, excepting when the artist required it for his work, but a subdued, nicely balanced light which fell with a soft caress, as it were, upon the statues and busts which stood in striking relief against the terra-cotta walls and among the dull green, plush-covered furniture.

The floor was of parquet, with here and there a Persian mat thrown down with apparent carelessness—"apparent," because in reality there was nothing careless about any part of the place. Every inch of it was studied with due regard to effect. Behind the easel, and over a statuette of Venus Aphrodite rising from the waves, hung a trophy of arms, a pair of fencing rapiers being among them.

Although it was daylight, a small red lamp was alight, and cast its soft glow around the corner in which it hung.

The fire-place was of carved oak, black oak, and the fire was of huge logs resting on brass dog-irons and surrounded by Dutch tiles. A Persian cat lay on the rug before the fire.

No one could enter the room without being struck by its grace, its artistic ensemble, and its comfort; for, alas! your artistic apartment is not always comfortable. In Senley Tyers' studio there was absolutely nothing to offend or weary the eye, which could rest everywhere with a delightful sense of repose. The chairs were all "easy" ones, with broad seats and sloping backs, which tempted one to sit and lounge in them. Mention must be made of a small oak cabinet which stood in a corner behind the lamp, and which was always kept locked, and then one can speak of the artist himself, who stood before his easel at work.

Seeing him in his loose velvet paint ing-jacket, with the soft light falling upon his face, with its dark eyes and long lashes, with its expression of dreamy melancholy, one would not have hesitated in calling his appearance striking, and, indeed, handsome. As a matter of fact, he looked at his best amid his present surroundings, and at his worst in such a place as, say, Trellorine, in the driving wind and rain.

A cigarette was between his lips, but he worked with evident care and anxiety, and every now and then paused and looked at the canvas with a strange

ORGANIZATION OF FARMERS.

A FEATURE OF THE DAY.

James Rogers Speaks Earnestly.

The development of Farmers' Institutes and other means of education on successful practical farming has proven beyond a doubt that the present day farmer requires to be a student of his work. The most successful ones are not, as a rule, those who do the greatest amount of manual labor, but they are found ranking first as prize-winners on all agricultural products. James Rogers, a resident of Tilsonburg, Oxford Co., Ont., for 45 years, has taken numerous first prizes during the year. A successful, reliable man, his statement will be of interest to many: "I have suffered for seven or eight years with Itching Piles; the torture and agony I cannot here find words to describe. Night after night was kept awake with the painful itching. I tried all the physicians and every known remedy all to no account, not even relief. In talking over my curious trouble with Mr. Chas. Thomson, our well known druggist, he recommended Chase's Ointment. To my wonder and surprise, I got relief from the second application. I firmly believe one box sufficient to cure any case of Itching Piles no matter of how long duration. I would not be without it for ten times its cost. In volunteering this testimony and my consent for the manufacturers of Chase's Ointment to use it as they wish, it is that like sufferers may know they can be cured." expression of admiration and discontent. The picture was a half-finished portrait of a lady, a face beautiful to loveliness.

Once or twice he turned from the easel and paced up and down the room, his smooth and rather cat-like footstep making no sound on the thick rug; then returned to his work with a sigh and a low-muttered imprecation.

Presently there came a knock. He turned the portrait round with its face to the easel, and unlocked the door. A correctly dressed page stood waiting.

"The Duchess of Mudshire, sir," he said.

Senley Tyers nodded.

"In five minutes," he said.

There was no valid reason why the Duchess of Mudshire should not have been admitted at once; but Senley Tyers was not only a talented artist, but a clever man, and he had learned something more than how to paint during the years he had been struggling and starving. He had learned the great secret, that in nine cases out of ten the world is ready to take you at your own valuation; that if you want to win the favor of the rich, the titled, the fashionable, you must not crawl and cringe, but assume to be, even if you do not feel, indifferent to their friendship, and pretend to feel a complete contempt for their opinion. The great world will do anything for you while you keep it at your feet, but kneel to it, and it will kick and spurn you.

So he kept the Duchess of Mudshire waiting while he smoked another cigarette; then lounging in a chair, with the cat on his knee, struck a silver bell, and only rose languidly, setting the cat down carefully, as the lady entered the room.

Her grace was past fifty, and was, if the truth must be told, commonplace, not vulgar, in appearance; but she was good-natured, and only smiled as Senley Tyers gave her a nod rather than a bow, and sauntered toward the easel. The duchess was accompanied by her maid, who removed her mistress' bonnet and cloak, and then meekly took a seat near the door.

"Good-morning, Mr. Tyers," said her grace. "I thought you said one o'clock?"

It was a quarter past. He looked at her absently.

"You are not too late," he said, coolly arranging a curtain, then calmly pointing to the sitters' dais and chair.

The duchess laughed.

"Oh," she said, "I thought I had mistaken the time, or you were not ready."

"No," he said. "Your grace does not like being kept waiting. Neither do I." The duchess stared at him as if she were on the point of being angry, then shrugged her shoulders and laughed, as though she were saying: "These extraordinary creatures must be humored and tolerated. It is folly to be angry with them."

"Five minutes, more or less, can mat-spend Thursday evening in my room here, with my books and my cat. Nice people? What care I how nice they be if they be not nice to me? And I am afraid your people would not be nice to me, your grace. They would wonder who I am, and why on earth I was there; and I should wonder, too."

"You are an extraordinary man," she said, laughing, but with a faint tinge of annoyance in her laugh. See it is of no use being civil to you."

He smiled.

"Not in the very least, your grace," he asserted.

"I am getting very tired," she said. "Isn't the time up?"

He glanced at an old English clock on a carved bracket.

"Another quarter of an hour."

"Let me see what you have done," she said; and she left the dais and went up to the easel. As she looked, a smile—a smile of satisfaction—beamed in her commonplace face.

"Oh, it's very good—very good," she said; "but—but isn't it rather—er—battering?"

"Very," said Senley Tyers, without looking up from his palette.

Her grace started and flushed angrily.

"I—I don't wish it to be flattering," she said. "I don't like to be laughed at any better than you do, Mr. Tyers."

"I beg your pardon," he said; "I can soon alter it."

He took up his brush, and with a few strokes made the face more truthful, and, necessarily, plainer and older.

"How is that?" he asked.

Her grace stood, red and uncomfortable, her eyes fixed upon the now too candid portrait.

"You—you are spoiling it," she said, angrily, disappointedly.

"Exactly," he said. "Let me beg of you to go back to your place, and leave me to paint my picture, your grace."

"I—I will not sit again to-day," she said, beckoning to her maid. "I will come again to-morrow."

"Not to-morrow; I am engaged, my grace," he said, respectfully but firmly.

"When then?" she demanded, haughtily.

He consulted an ivory tablet.

"This day three months, if you please, duchess," he said, in exactly the same tone.

Her grace stared at him, grew redder and redder, opened her lips, as if to crush him with a haughty rejoinder, then marched to her place, and resumed her seat without a word.

A faint smile played about Senley Tyers' thin lips as he painted off the cruelly candid lines and blotches he had put in, and he worked on until the clock chimed the hour. Then he laid down his brush and stood motionless, like a machine that had run down.

The Duchess of Mudshire rose. The maid put on her bonnet and cloak, and her grace swept to the door. Senley Tyers glided to it and opened it.

"Good-morning, your grace," he said, in his soft, listless voice. "This day week at the same hour."

Her grace pursed her lips. She longed to say something insolent, but—well, she wanted her portrait in the Academy very, very badly, and smothering her wrath, she bowed and departed.

Senley Tyers dropped into a chair beside the fire.

"That is the way to treat them, Tiger," he murmured to the cat, which leaped softly on his knee and rubbed her head against his breast. "That is the way, and the only way. Spurn them, or they will spurn you; eh, my sweet puss? It is good for them and good for you. You and I know that, don't we? The fools! There are half a dozen men who can paint lying portraits as well, and better, than we can, but these aristocrats—idiots!—believe in us, Tiger, because we are rude to them and pretend that we don't care whether they come to us or not. One would think this morning's comedy would ruin us; but you and I know that it won't, eh? We know that the maid—yes, and the duchess herself—will go up and down Vanity Fair telling everybody how insufferably rude that ill-bred nobody, that painter, Senley Tyers, has been to her, and warning all her friends by all means to avoid him. And the result? The friends will say, 'He must be great and clever, he must be a genius, or he would not dare to treat the dear duchess so cavalierly,' and they will flock to us all the more eagerly. What a world it is, eh, Tiger? You and I know it—know it

"I see. I suppose you want me to apologize for keeping you waiting," she said, good-humoredly.

"Oh, no," he murmured, softly, in an indescribable tone of contempt: "I should be the last to tempt your grace to insincerity."

"Really!" she began, then broke off, as he lifted the canvas he had been painting from the easel. "What is that picture?"

"A portrait," he said, setting it down carefully, with its face to the wall.

"Will you let me see it?" she asked.

"Pardon," he murmured. "I never show an unfinished portrait to any other person than the original."

Her Grace of Mudshire colored again, and opened her lips, but checked herself, and laughed.

"I think you are more than ordinarily rude this morning, Mr. Tyers," she said.

Senley Tyers bowed, and placed her canvas on the easel.

"My rudeness will not carry me to the extent of contradicting your grace," he said. "Please do not frown," he added, as he took up his palette and brush.

"I have succeeded, I think, in giving a pleasant expression to the face, but if I am to keep it, I must ask you to help me."

Her grace tapped her foot angrily.

"Really, Mr. Tyers," she said, with a laugh, "you are rather unreasonable. You do your best to put your sisters in a bad humor, and then blame them for showing it."

He smiled faintly, but made no response, and waited, brush in hand.

The great lady smoothed her ruffled feathers and dispelled the frown. She was a good-natured, simple-minded person, and she was very anxious to have her portrait painted by the artist who was rapidly becoming famous and fashionable.

Senley Tyers glanced at her, as if to ascertain whether the ill-humored expression had vanished, then with a skillful touch or two arranged the folds of her dress and put her in the proper pose, and went on with his painting.

Once or twice he paused, went slowly to the end of the room, lighted a cigarette at the lamp, and then resumed his painting.

He did not ask her permission to smoke, nor did he ask her if she was tired; he acted, indeed, as if he were painting from a plaster cast.

Her grace was not fond of silence, and after a time she addressed a remark or two to him.

"I suppose you have a great many portraits to paint, Mr. Tyers?"

"More than I can execute."

"Yes? That was the reason why you refused to paint Lady Landley's portrait?"

"Not at all. Lady Landley insisted upon being painted in a crimson dress, which would have covered us both with ridicule; so I sent her to a brother artist who does not mind being laughed at— who can afford it, I should say."

Her grave laughed and thought this over, and the maid stored up the little anecdote, that she might repeat it in the servants' hall, for Senley Tyers had spoken with intentional distinctness.

"Really, you are very independent. You are not afraid of losing your patrons, Mr. Tyers?"

"No," he replied, slowly, and intent upon his work. "Six months ago I was penniless and starving. I am too familiar with hunger to be afraid of it, your grace."

"Dear me! I didn't know. And now, I suppose, you are quite rich!" she said, with that ineffable insolence which the great seem to consider one of their privileges.

"Rich enough to do as I please; no man on earth can be richer," he said, coolly as before.

Her grace nodded.

"Will you come to a little 'At Home' of mine on Thursday next, Mr. Tyers?" she said.

"No, I thank your grace," was the slow, languid response.

The duchess bit her lip. She was not accustomed to meet with refusals, especially from persons of Senley Tyers' class.

"I am sorry you are engaged," she said. "You would meet some nice people, I think."

"I am not engaged," he said. "I shall make tools of it—tools of it; all—but one!" He raised his head as he spoke, and a touch of absolute pain came into his eyes and across his lips. "All but one, and if we do not take care, Tiger, she will make tools of us."

He sprang up—his quick ears (and they were as sharp as the cat's) had caught the sound of footsteps—went quickly to the cabinet, and taking a small vial from a shelf, poured out a few drops of a clear liquid into a glass, and drank it.

A moment afterward the page knocked and announced:

"Lady Florence Hathcote."

A woman, lovely as a vision, stood in the door-way. She was tall, fair as a lily in complexion, with auburn hair, which in places glistened like red gold. Her eyes were violet, her lips as perfect as lips could be.

Tall, graceful, lovely as the Venus which glowed whitely in marble opposite her, there was only one flaw, one speck on her perfection. In form and feature shone forth a pride which even Satan might have envied.

Her calm, serene eyes played for a moment on Senley Tyers, then swept the room, then came back and rested on him, and her lips parted.

It was only the commonplace "Good-morning" that she uttered in clear and low yet bell-like tones; but if it had been "Kneel, slave!" Senley Tyers could not have bowed his head more humbly.

He had tried to retain his erect attitude, to keep the languid, listless sang-froid which had so angered the Duchess of Mudshire, but they melted away like last winter's snow before the glance of those violet eyes, the clear ring of the imperious voice.

With tightly compressed lips and quickly beating heart he stood silent with bent head, a slave who hated and loathed his slavery, but a slave still.

Edwin—What do you think I have in this locket, dearest? The postage stamp on your last letter. It has been touched by your lips. It often touches mine. Angelina—Oh, Edwin, I'm so very sorry. I moistened that horrid postage stamp on Fido's dear, damp nose.—The Waterbury.

HEINTZMAN CO. PIANO

WHEN you are ready to purchase a Piano for a lifetime, not the makeshift instruments for a few years' use, but the Piano whose sterling qualities will leave absolutely nothing to be desired, then insist upon having a Heintzman & Co. Piano.

Its pure singing tone is not an artificial quality soon to wear away, leaving harshness in place of brilliancy, dullness in place of sweetness, but an inherent right of the Heintzman. Forty-five years of patient endeavor upon this point, non-deterioration with age, has made the Heintzman what it is—the acknowledged standard of durability.

Fine Apples.

There has been an exhibition in the window of the EXPRESS Book Store for the past few days three remarkably large and fine looking apples. They were grown on the 3rd con. of Richmond, lot 14, and are the product of the orchard of Mr. Iibri Sills, who kindly presented them to the EXPRESS. They are of the fall pippin variety and have come in for a great deal of admiration since they were placed in the window.

Kindergarten.

The Kindergarten school opened on Tuesday, much to the delight of the children, parents and guardians. The following efficient staff of teachers are in charge: Miss Hypatia Fox, director; Miss Georgia Daly, Miss Maggie Coxall and Miss Minnie Grange. Starting next Monday a bus will call at the houses in town and take the children to and from the school at the nominal rate of 50 cents per month. Every Saturday the bus will give the children of subscribers a free ride; non-subscribers will be charged 5 cents.

Bee-Keepers Association.

A joint meeting of the North American Bee-Keepers Association and the Ontario Bee-Keepers Association commences in the Auditorium of the Normal School, Toronto, on Wednesday, 4th Sept. The Convention will last 3 or 4 days and the leading Apiarists of North America are expected to be present and take part. While the programme is not yet complete the list of prominent speakers who have already signified their intention of being present shows that the meeting will be a very interesting one. Mr. Allen Pringle, of Seiby, will speak on the "Mistakes of Bee Keepers and Bee-Journals.

A New Departure in Amusements.

A rich treat is in store for the people of Napanee on September 12th when the celebrated Miss Evelyn Heine, prima donna soprano, Madame Ada Heine, the noted solo pianist and Captain Rider will give one of their enjoyable entertainments entitled choice cuttings from bouquets of music, song and travel, in the Opera House. The entertainment will commence with a grand miscellaneous concert, and will conclude with a Tour Round the World in 40 minutes. The picturesque scenes thrown on to screen twenty feet in diameter are new to the public, most of them having been taken only last season. They will be illuminated by the new, largest, and most powerful Oxyhydrogen light travelling. In brilliancy equal to 1500 candles. Cleverly written facts describing the various places of interest, will be delivered by Captain J. A. Rider, the favorite artist, who has toured the globe and made his discourse from personal observation.

The Ontario Game Laws.

A pamphlet containing the Ontario game laws for 1895 has been issued. The close season for deer is from Nov. 15th to Nov. 1st, 1896, and no moose, elk, caribou or reindeer shall be hunted before October 25th, 1900. Hounds found running deer in close season may be killed by any person on sight. Not more than two deer shall be taken in one season by one person. Wild turkeys cannot be killed before Oct. 15th, 1897, nor can prairie fowl or English or Mongolian pheasants before Sept. 15th, 1897. Snipe, woodcock or partridge must not be sold, exposed for sale or given away before Sept. 15th, 1897.

Sad Fatal Accident.

On Wednesday of last week William Gibson, Will J. Detlor, and W. W. O'Flynn, started out to have a few days hunting and fishing at Gull lake, back of Arden. On Friday morning as the boys were starting out on Gull lake, Gibson got into the boat ahead of the other two with a gun in his hand. In stepping into the boat it moved, causing him to stagger and strike the hammer of the gun against the boat, when it exploded. The charge entered just above the left ear, tearing a channel along the side of the head, causing instant unconsciousness, and death soon after. Words cannot describe the dismay and sorrow of Gibson's companions. The accident happened at eight o'clock, and the boys had to row five miles and then take a conveyance fourteen miles to Clarendon to get railway connections. The remains reached Napanee on the six o'clock train. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson were at Belleville when the sad news reached them, and they returned as soon as possible to Napanee. William Gibson was the eldest son of Mr. Stephen Gibson, Registrar of Lennox and Addington, and a nephew of Mr. R. C. Clute, Q.C., of Toronto, and was a general favorite with his companions, and well liked all over town. He was about twenty years of age, and was an especially promising young man. Last year he attended Victoria University, and intended taking a course in the Practical Science School. The funeral, which took place on Sunday last to the Napanee Cemetery, was very largely attended.

Destroyed by Fire.

While Mr. Thos. G. McWain was threshing on the farm of Mr. Craig Carscallen, Fredericksburgh, on Saturday last, fire broke out in the barn and so quickly did the flames spread that the men had barely time to escape from the building before it was one mass of fire. One of the threshers lost his vest, which contained a valuable watch. The contents were entirely consumed, including the threshing outfit, which was an entirely new one which Mr. McWain purchased this year. Mr. John McConkey, the tenant, had a small insurance on the contents, but there was no insurance on the barn. Mr. McWain, with commendable pluck has ordered a new thresher from Hamilton and expects to be at work again in a few days. The fire is supposed to have originated from a spark from the smokestack.

On Saturday afternoon the residence of Robt. Burley, six miles west of Odessa, known as Burley Place, was burned to the ground. The fire caught from the chimney in the summer house. All the members of the family were absent except Mrs. Burley, who discovered the fire in time to save only a few things from the flames. The piano and some bedding were all that was saved. The woodhouse was also burned containing a large spring wagon. A pig pen adjoining the woodhouse was burned and three large fat hogs consumed. The fire took place about one o'clock in the afternoon. Insurance on house and contents $1,200.

Vestry Meeting.

A special vestry meeting was held in St. Alban's church hall, Adolphustown, on Monday Sept. 1st, for the purpose of filling the vacancies caused by the death of Capt. Chalmers, Church Warden and Lay Delegate. Frank Chalmers, reeve, was with the hearty approval of all present appointed by the rector to succeed his lamented father as Clergyman's Church Warden. Alfred Taverner was elected Lay Delegate to the Synod by the cordial vote of the vestry. Thomas Gibbs was elected Vestry Clerk in the room of Frank Chalmers, reeve.

The preamble and resolutions moved by Church Warden S. M. Outwater, and endorsed by Thomas Gibbs, were carried by a standing vote of the vestry with evident signs of deep feeling.

That whereas it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst by the hand of death, Capt. James Chalmers, an old member of this church, Churchwarden for 23 years and Synods-man, and our hearts have been deeply moved thereby; therefore resolved, 1 That in his death we have lost an efficient officer of this church and faithful churchman, a man of true and honest purpose, of kind heart, of sound judgment and an earnest Christian.

Resolved, 2 That we tender to the widow and family of the deceased our unaffected sympathy and condolence in this their most affecting bereavement.

Resolved, 3 That a copy of these resolutions be communicated to the family of the deceased, and that they be published in the Napanee newspapers.
